inspection discussion, so far as the White House is concerned, will be postporred for a day or two, as the President will be out of Washington until Thursday. There were no developments today, the subject having received little attention. The President gave the packers to understand yesterday what his policy would be in the event they attempted to defeat the legislation that is about to be enacted. He stands pat on that little tip to the packers. The belief is pretty widespread that the packers will not want any further tip and that they will be "good." The formal report of the investigation made by Messrs. Neill and Revnolds is being put into written shape and will be presented to the President in a few days. He will then be prepared to make days. He will then be prepared to make

While the packers will probably not use any direct influence to defeat the inspection provision from now on, the probability of their getting in a great deal of indirect work against it is considerable. Through the cattlemen of the west, who are already being threatened with serious loss to their being threatened with serious loss to their business, the packers hope to get at a num-ber of western senators and representatives for at least modifications of the existing amendments. The western congressmen cannot afford to let any feature of the amendment operate against their cattle and sheep men, and will be disposed to insist upon such changes as are necessary to safe-guard them from annoyance and loss of

Wall Street Broker Proved Himself

"Good Leather." Edwin S. Hooley, whose firm, E. S. surprised his creditors yesterday by paying them the balance of their claims, of which they had absolved him in the usual bankruptcy compromise. Hooley later formed the firm of Hooley, Learnard & Co. of 15 Broad street. He became known as the Lawson broker in Wall street and was popularly credited with executing the orders of the Boston speculator. In the last fifteen months his business has prospered, and on Saturday last he sent checks to his former creditors in payment in full for all their claims, including those which they had compounded. Mr. Hooley yesterday said he was too busy to talk about the payment. Friends of his stated, however, that when the settlement was made by which he was enabled to go into business again there was a balance of $500,000 which had been wiped out in the settlement. This amount, with

Election Frauds in Omaha.

An indictment was reported by the Doug las county grand jury, at Omaha, yesterday against William H. Elborn, formerly city clerk of Omaha, charging him with tampering with the ballots in the recent republican primary election. It is charged that many ballots which had been marked for many ballots which had been marked for his opponent were changed after the re-turns had been made, so as to appear to have been cast for Elborn, who was a can-didate for renomination, and who instituted a contest, asking for a recount. Ten indictments were also returned against election officers in the third ward for alleged mis-conduct in the operation of the voting machines in the recent city election. No name will be given out until arrests are made.

Young Man Crushed Against Ceiling. Caught in a power belt driven by a wheel making 120 revolutions a minute. George Royle, twenty years old, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon. He was dashed against the ceiling of a room in the mill of the Harlem Contracting Company of New York city. Noticing that the belt was running loose, Doyle, a weigher, tried to fix it and was caught. So quickly was he killed that the could not call once for help, but the engineer noticed a jolt in the ma-chinery and stopped his engine.

the largest steamer of the lighthouse service fleet, employed in carrying supplies to the lighthouses and ships in exposed localities on the north Atlantic coast, will, it is expected, pay her annual visit to the Potomac within the next day or two. The Armeria arrived at the lighthouse supply sta-expensive. If so, we have something in this lot to meet your requirements.

THE MATERIALS are fine Percales in a wide assortment of both light and dark patterns, and handsome Union Linens and Cannon Cloths in white, navy blue, Alice blue, lavender and the natural linen shade. These suits are the balance of a manufacturer's stock and were made to sell at $4.50 and $5.

THE STYLE is one of the best we have seen this season. WAIST is made with fine cluster tucks down center of front, finished with double box pleats on each side and buttons in front, a feature which will interest many women who do not care for button-back garments. THE SKIRT is a gored model, finished with two folds of material around bottom. This suit is the best we have ever offered for so little money. All sizes from 34 to 42. SELLING.
